

operate with a cross border judicial inquiry into the atrocity.

Questions

Sean Hoey said he supported calls for a north-south tribunal.

"The Omagh families and my own family deserve to know the whole truth and only a proper cross-border public inquiry will get to the truth", he said. "I want to know what the British and Irish governments are afraid of from an inquiry."

Michael Gallagher, whose son Aidan was killed at Omagh, declared today: "Will he fully co-operate in any public inquiry? We know he did not go into the witness box at his trial but is he now prepared to fully co-operate?"

Meanwhile the Northern Ireland Chief Constable, Sir Hugh Orde, is to attend a meeting of the Northern Ireland Policing Board. The body is expected to raise serious concerns about how the investigation was handled.

Sean Hoey, 38, from Jonesborough, South Armagh, was acquitted last month of the 29 murders at Omagh and a series of other terrorist related charges.

 \times

E-mail this story to a friend

Post your comment

12:08 Bid to attract young voters 09:59 Reprieve for Nigerian woman 09:46 Crunch time ahead of US election 09:39 Pair stabbed in Dublin incident Limerick man charged with assault Suspicious death in Donegal Fire at top London hospital Ø Ø Fatal car crash in Co Offaly Woman dies in suspicious blaze NI divorces at all-time high তা Indecent assault in Co Down Ø Gardai search for missing women Pensioner burgled at knifepoint Ø Antrim house attacked by vandals Arsonists target Orange halls Ø Ø Man in court after stabbing Ø Man dies in Antrim crash III tidings for Taoiseach Ø Selling snow to Eskimos YOUR COMMENTS

COMMENT TRACKER: LOGIN to track comments on this story

6 comments Ministers urged to start delivering

3 comments

Police pay out £3.5 million

Selling snow to Eskimos 3 comments

