

THREADS FOR CORPORATE JUSTICE

Our planet's natural resources are in high demand. Some large corporations are making huge profits from the exploitation of land, water, forests and minerals. The race for natural resources has put millions of people at risk of abuse – especially in countries where Trócaire works. Those who peacefully resist this abuse are under attack. They are beaten, intimidated and even murdered.

Trócaire volunteers collaborated with Conflict Textiles to create this piece of solidarity art as part of the campaign that calls for companies to be held to account for harming people and the planet.

Conflict Textiles holds a large collection of international textiles that provides voice to, and shows solidarity with, communities impacted by conflict and human rights abuses.

This collaboration is part of Trócaire's campaign calling for legislation in Ireland and the UK to regulate companies to help protect people and the planet from this type of abuse.

We hope you enjoy the exhibition.
