

THREADS FOR CORPORATE JUSTICE

1. Go Green, Stop the Fracking Machine

Locally and globally, communities are coming together to oppose the actions of the extractive industry while championing a sustainable and just future.

By Eileen Treacy

2. Burning Dreams

Tobacco farming is a huge industry which can rely on child labour. It is also a leading cause of deforestation, water pollution and air pollution in countries like Malawi.

By Thea Lawlor

3. Earth Activists

Ruth Alipaz, an indigenous Bolivian activist, opposes powerful mining companies who are causing environmental destruction to the Amazon rainforest.

By Jacqueline Michaux

4. Technology Connects

Common technological devices in our homes, schools and offices could be linked to human rights abuses in other parts of the world.

By Patricia Devlin

5. Stop Land Grabs

Brave indigenous communities peacefully resist the actions of some big businesses who violently evict them from their land, destroying homes, lives and livelihoods.

By Marie-Anne Michel

6. Riches of the Earth Benefit a Few

Too often big business in the Global North benefits from the profits while communities in the Global South have to deal with the devastating consequences.

By Siobhan Lehane

7. The Price of Palm Oil

Palm oil is produced at the cost of the environment, species and indigenous peoples' land, livelihood, and culture.

By Patricia Devlin

8. Global Solidarity

Together we can build a culture of global solidarity to hold companies and governments to account for harming people and the planet.

By Jeannie McCann

9. People Over Profit

Local needs and community interests are often ignored by faceless entities who prioritise profit above all else, including in the fishing industry.

By Eiméar Savage

10. Fast Fashion

Our demand for fast fashion has devastating impacts in other parts of the world, including unfair working conditions, low wages, and environmental destruction.

By Teresa Hill

11. What Price Profit?

Gross inequality exists in supply chains when companies focus on profit over people. Human rights abuses can occur, including workers being paid buttons.

By Anita MacNabb

12. Fair Trade Chocolate

When workers are not paid fairly and farmers do not get a fair price for their produce, too often children drop out of school.
