

Human Rights Day at the Ulster Museum 2024

With Conflict Textiles, Amnesty International and ACSONI

11th December 2024

Conflict Textiles, Amnesty International and the Ulster Museum celebrated Human Rights Day at the museum that was attended by members of the public and invited guests.

There was an interactive performance by Donna Nalongo that had the room drumming, clapping and moving to the beat, followed by a reflection by Takura Makoni on the UN and how it serves the people of the world. This was followed by a tour of Threads of Empowerment by Roberta Bacic and a look into the history of both the UN and Amnesty International by Patrick Corrigan. Last of all there was a video for one of Amnesty's campaigns on Oqba Hashad, detained in Egypt, a hands on mini-workshop to show support and some tea to keep everyone hydrated. Photos by EG

Some of the participants in front of the final dolls made

Donna Nalongo demonstrating a drum beat

Takura Makoni reflecting on the UN

Volunteers taking part in making music

Threads of Empowerment tour

Roberta Bacic explaining the history of Cimarron

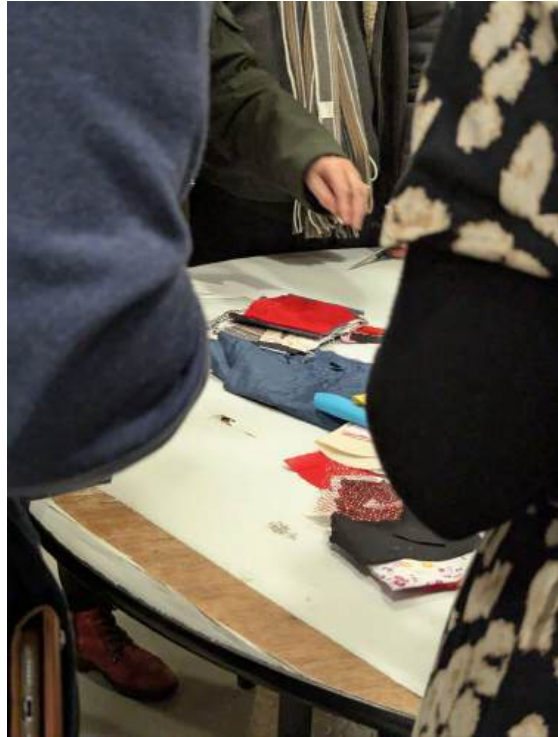

Professor Gillian Robinson explaining the history of Conflict Textiles

Patrick Corrigan speaking on the history of Amnesty International

Part of the workshop

Details on the workshop and the conversations around it

Gluing the final piece together

IT to the rescue

