

International Day of Nonviolence 2025

Photo Gallery

Marking International Day of Nonviolence – on Mohandas Gandhi's birthday – Conflict Textiles, in association with the Library at Ulster University, Belfast, organised an interactive session on Nonviolence in Action, with features on bibliography & pamphlets/postcards, on spinning and weaving – which Gandhi promoted and practised. This was an associated outreach activity connected to the arpilleras on display currently at the library as part of a permanent rotating exhibition Ulster University Library, Belfast - Nonviolence In Action

This was the invite and concept interactive session

It was an interactive pop-in session in the library, close to the exhibition and we were able to engage with Patircia Fulcher, librarian, who hosted us. The library was set to welcome people and had four stations:

1st Station: Display of pertinent books, pamphlets and postcards for people to look at and flicker. Books and other materials came from the library itself, from inter-library loans and curator's Roberta Bacic personal library.

2nd Station: Ellie Ferguson, student at UU in the School of Arts had an actual loom and showed us how she uses it and also referred to her studies and her interest in connecting the weaving to fashion. She also had samples of her work and referred to other specific connections and projects.
