Families want Saville report

powered

By George Jackson
Monday February 04 2008

The families of the 13 civilians shot dead by British army paratroopers in the Bogside area of Derry 36 years ago, yesterday called for the Saville Inquiry report into the killings to be made available to them on the same day that it's submitted to the British Government.

A crowd in excess of 5,000 attended the annual Bloody Sunday commemoration march in Derry, among them Northern Ireland's Deputy First Minister Martin McGuinness, SDLP leader Mark Durkan and Sinn Fein President Gerry Adams.

In a recent letter to the families of the Bloody Sunday victims, inquiry
