Victims worker meets relatives

By Allison Morris

02/05/08

Victims commissioner Brendan McAllister met Raymond McCord and a number of other families who lost loved ones during the Troubles at his first public appointment in north Belfast yesterday.

The possible benefits of a truth commission was discussed by a panel, which as well as Mr McAllister included Mark Thompson of Relatives for Justice and Alan Wardell of the Shankill Stress and Trauma clinic.

Mr McCord announced this week that he and other families are to set up their own victims group after criticising the four-person Victims Commission appointed by the executive.

His son Raymond jnr (22) was murdered by a UVF gang in 1997.

The event was part of Community Relations Week.
