Bradley, Eames back payment of £12,000 to victims in North

In this section »

- Catholic body backs short-term use of entrance exam in Northern schools
- Dissident republicans suspected of security alerts
- Enterprise Ireland and banks swap staff 'to speed up lending'
- Civilian PSNI man who shot himself awarded damages for 'negligence'

RENAGH HOLOHAN

LORD EAMES and Denis Bradley have strongly advocated that their suggested recognition payment of £12,000 be paid to the victims of the Troubles in the North just as the sum of €15,000 was paid to 300 victims in the Republic.

While they recognised there was no agreement on what a victim was, Mr Bradley said it would be sinful to give a payment in Donegal but not across the road in Northern Ireland. It was part of the healing process. “It is best and better to do it and do it soon.”

Loyalists had no difficulty with the payments; it was middle-class unionism that did.

The co-chairs of the Consultative Group on the Past said yesterday’s address to the British-Irish Parliamentary Assembly was their last appearance together as the group no longer existed.

Their report with 30 recommendations, including the establishment of a legacy commission, had been given to the Northern Secretary of State and had been shared initially with the Dublin Government. It was now under consideration and implementation would require legislation.

Mr Bradley said that if an estimated £300 million was not spent now implementing their report, it would cost at least £1 billion to allow what was already happening to continue.

If the Historical Enquiries Team was not relieved of the burden of examining each file, it could be working in the North for the next 15 years.
He said there appeared to be an increase in the arguments about the “Ulsterisation” of the problem in that the security forces in the North were not pleased with what they detected was a withdrawal of responsibility by the security services in Britain.

Mr Bradley said there was no landscape outside their report which addressed with integrity what could be done for the bereaved of Omagh. He did not believe any inquiry would take place into the Finucane case. He believed the issue would remain alive and well for up to 20 years.

This article appears in the print edition of the Irish Times

Advertisement

Latest

- Limerick food distributor Pallas sold to Sysco
- McCoy keeping National options open
- Bank of Ireland draws down recapitalisation funds
- Ulster name squad to face Ospreys
- 370 press complaints
- Finucane case
- Heineken to sell Cork Beamish site
- Court recommends doubling of SR Technics redundancy offer

Popular Stories

- Portrait of Ireland as a laughing stock
- Ireland is downgraded by leading credit rating agency
- Customer dies in incident at B&O store in Tallaght
- Kenny not expected to apologise for strong language at meeting
- Police on high alert after Belfast, Lurgan disruptions

Your Vote

- Yes
- No

Results

Should Taxi Regulator Kathleen Doyle stop issuing new licences as called for by protesting taxi drivers?

Crossword Club

Today's Interactive Irish Times Crosaire and Simplex crosswords, plus 10 years of crossword archive.

Advertisement

VIP Residential Security
Your family’s safety an issue? Have a security consultation now
www.standsolutions.co.uk

Bad Breath Problems?
Our natural remedy gives last, dependable and lasting relief.
www.fangocur.com/Bad_Breath

Want peace of mind?
Security in Bournemouth. Try here for home security.
www.thomsonlocal.com/directalarmssecurity

Sudoku »

Download and print the daily Irish Times sudoku grid

APRIL BUDGET
Get the latest news and analysis on the upcoming Budget

150th Anniversary of The Irish Times
The Irish Times celebrates its 150th anniversary with a view of the newspaper past to present

AUDIO SLIDESHOW: Heaney Honoured
A 70th Birthday tribute to Seamus Heaney was held at the DLR Poetry Now International Poetry Festival in Dun Laoghaire on Saturday. Bryan O'Brien attended.

Reinventing the circus with human wonders
What goes on behind the scenes at the most famous circus in the world?

A question of ethnic identity
The issue of whether Travellers should be given minority status has met with mixed reaction, even amongst the Traveller community itself.

Homes
19 Kempton Park, Navan Road, Dublin 7
Price: €548,000
Bedrooms: 3
See More »

Jobs
Select your categories

Cars
Volvo has come up trumps with a family car that just keeps on giving