Minister rejects 'poor judgment' allegation

In this section »

- Motorists urged to take care as snow sweeps country
- 90th anniversary of first Dáil celebrated
- White Paper on tackling crime to follow lengthy public consultation
- Report finds Irish teenagers have high drunkenness rate
- Sudden deaths linked to alcohol
- Fanning gives new U2 single first airing online

Bernadette Sands McKevitt wrote letter of complaint to Mr Ahern
Photograph: The Irish Times

CONOR LALLY

MINISTER FOR Justice Dermot Ahern has defended himself against allegations that he used poor judgment when he was contacted by the family of Real IRA leader Michael McKevitt with complaints about his conditions in prison.

Mr Ahern added he would not be apologising to the families of those killed by the Real IRA bomb in Omagh in 1998 because he had done nothing wrong.

“Anyone who knows me in public life for 22 years as a TD and before that as a councillor knows there is virtually nobody who has opposed paramilitary violence more than I have,” he said.

Mr Ahern was speaking publicly for the first since a Sunday newspaper published e-mails from McKevitt’s wife, Bernadette Sands McKevitt, to Mr Ahern.
In the e-mails, which were obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, she complained her husband had been denied visits and compassionate release for his mother’s funeral because he was engaged in a protest at Portlaoise Prison, where he is serving 20 years for directing terrorism.

Mr Ahern said while he passed the e-mails on to the then minister for justice Michael McDowell, he did not suggest any course of action to Mr McDowell or make any representation on McKevitt’s behalf.

Mr Ahern said that as a public representative he was duty bound to have “compassion and empathy” when the family of an inmate came to him in a distressed state.

The Minister said that he had handled many similar “difficult cases” in the past.

He said that he had always asked people to put their concerns in writing so he could pass them on to the relevant authority.

In the case of McKevitt, his protest had ended and he had been returned to the normal prison regime by the time Mr McDowell replied to Mr Ahern in July 2004.

The Omagh Victims’ Families group said Mr Ahern had used “bad judgment” and called on him to resign.

This article appears in the print edition of the Irish Times

ADVERTISEMENT

Latest »

- 12:12 Two held over attempted armed robbery in NI
- 12:09 Five dead in South Korea clashes
- 12:04 City say Milan ‘bottled’ Kaka move
- 12:53 Statement by AIB chief executive
- 12:54 Nadal cases into second round
- 12:52 ‘Motocross deaths’ anniversary comes at ‘dangerous’ time
- 12:41 Two arrested following Dáil anniversary protest
- 12:38 ‘Honeymoon period’ over for Celtic Tiger

Popular Stories

- Most Read
- Most Emailed

- 1State to proceed with plan to recapitalise AIB and BoI
- 2Property developer found dead at home
- 3‘Piling’ Anglo losses on to national debt risks bankrupting the State
- 4Bank shares lose half their value in market ‘car crash’
- 5European journalists deliver the last rites to Celtic Tiger

- 1State to proceed with plan to recapitalise AIB and BoI
- 2Property developer found dead at home
- 3Credibility shredded by mess of Anglo Irish
- 4Fee-paying schools got EUR100m subsidy from State last year
- 5State to proceed with plan to recapitalise AIB and BoI

Your Vote »

- Yes
- No

Can Barack Obama live up to the expectations for his presidency?

Crossword Club »

Today's Interactive Irish Times Crosaire and Simplex crosswords, plus 10 years of crossword archive.
Sudoku »

Download and print the daily Irish Times sudoku grid

- Obama Inauguration: Full coverage of Barack Obama's inauguration
- The versatile historian: Historian, media darling and Bertie biographer Richard Aldous is one of UCD's brightest stars.
- Candidates for the catwalk: How well would our male Cabinet Ministers fare in a politicians' fashion show?
- Serving up a new vocation: Sean Corkery's uncle was a chef and the young Cork man, fuelled by a passion for food, followed in his footsteps only to find that his true life path lay with the Church.
- Norwegians crossing boundaries: A broad-minded musical education, regular rural retreats, and a huge range of influences from Misha Alperin to Abba - these are what make Norwegian band In the Country so, well, Norwegian, according to pianist Morten Qvenild.

Homes

- 5 Ballygearda, Hugginstown, Co Kilkenny Price: €315,000

Jobs

Select your categories
Vast improvement on past models in the form of Hyundai's i20 supermini

Find »

• Dating

I am a Man Looking for a Woman Located All Only with photos: Next »