Challenge to British to publish Collusion Reports

Published: 28 June, 2007

Mr Molloy said:

"For years the British government have been saying that they are not prepared to publish the Stevens, Stalker and Sampson Reports into collusion because to do so would jeopardise the potential of future prosecutions. This week in a classic case of the British State closing ranks we were told that no such prosecutions will take place.

"In the wake of this decision I would now call on the British government to publish the Stevens, Stalker and Sampson Reports. If they continue to refuse to publish these reports then it will be another glaring example of the British policy of concealment and cover-up." ENDS
